

New board chair takes helm at LHC

By Enterprise Staff

Livingston HealthCare Foundation has welcomed Ruth Striegel Weissman as the next chair of the Livingston HealthCare Board of Directors.

Weissman replaces David Stanley, who served as the board chairman since 2013.

"We are thrilled that Ruth has accepted the position," Sally O'Connor, executive director of the Livingston HealthCare Foundation, said in an LHC new release.

Weissman is a faculty member and former provost and vice president for academic affairs at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Connecticut, the release said. She is well-known for her research on eating and weight disorders. She was also involved in psychology research at Yale and other universities in the U.S. and Germany. Weissman currently lives on Snowy Range Ranch in Paradise Valley with her family.

As Weissman moves into her position, Stanley will continue his involvement with the board as the foundation raises money for the capital campaign to help improve and equip LHC. The foundation has raised $9.6 million of the $10 million goal.

"His ongoing involvement will provide continuity as we plan for the future," Weissman said of Stanley in the release.

She said she looks forward to serving the community as the new board chair.
